

Stitcher Now Available for BlackBerry Curve 8800 and 8820

Stitcher today announced the release of its streaming-audio application for the 8800 and 8820

San Francisco, July 28, 2009 – Stitcher, an award-winning provider of news and talk radio for smartphone users, is now available for the BlackBerry Curve 8800 and 8820, two models for which the app has been in great demand recently. 8800 and 8820 users can download the Stitcher app at www.stitcher.com/dl. This version of Stitcher will soon be available in BlackBerry App World™.

“We’ve long wanted to make Stitcher accessible to Curve 8800 and 8820 users, giving them digital content wherever they are, whenever they want it,” said Stitcher CEO and co-founder Noah Shanok. “We received so many requests for Stitcher on the 8800 and 8820 that we gladly made these models a priority.”

Stitcher was introduced into BlackBerry’s App World in May 2009 after a successful year as an iPhone app. Stitcher is now available on the Storm, Curve 8300, 8310, 8320, 8800, 8820, 8900 and Bold 9000 and will continue to roll out for additional BlackBerry models, as well as new mobile platforms.

The Stitcher app for iPhone and BlackBerry smartphones allows users to enjoy leading digital content in an audio format, on the go – also known as Smart Radio. Stitcher’s release onto the 8800 and 8820 marks yet another stride the company has taken toward making free Smart Radio available to all smartphone users.
